

Abstract of the Disclosure

Device for regulating or controlling humidity and/or temperature, which is arranged in a cooking area of a cooking appliance, includes a water-guiding device with a regulatable or controllable water intake and a water outlet, the water-guiding device having guide elements in the form of elongate holes in order to guide the downward-flowing water in a particular direction. Condensation of the steam present in the processing area can take place at this water surface.